

1 6-307. Consolidating cases.

2 A. Consolidation motions; judge assignment. Cases may be consolidated in 3 appropriate circumstances. Consolidated cases shall be heard by the judge assigned to the oldest 4 case (the case bearing the lowest case number) in which the judge has not been excused, 5 challenged, or recused. The parties may stipulate to a different assigned judge to hear the 6 consolidated cases with permission of that judge.

7 B. Filings; copies. The motion to consolidate and the court’s order to consolidate
8 shall be filed in the oldest case (the case bearing the lowest case number). Copies of the motion
9 and order shall be filed in all the consolidated cases. After consolidation, all pleadings, motions,
10 and other papers shall be filed in the oldest case. Copies shall be filed in all the remaining cases.

11 C. Captions; titles. The case number of each case consolidated shall appear in the 12 caption of all pleadings, motions, and other papers filed after consolidation. In addition, if the 13 pleading, motion, or other paper does not apply to all consolidated cases, the title shall include the 14 case number(s) to which it pertains, e.g., “Motion to Suppress on Count II of D-101-CR-2021-15 00000.”

16 D. Effect of consolidation. If cases are consolidated specifically for plea and 17 sentencing, they are considered to be one case for purposes of sentencing. This results in a single 18 judgment and sentence.

22 Committee commentary. — Consolidation of criminal cases is a procedural mechanism
23 which avoids repetitious litigation and facilitates speedy administration of justice. Consolidating

1 separate charging documents yields a single charging document containing separate counts. See
2 State v. Compton, 1953-NMSC-036, ¶¶ 41-42, 57 N.M. 227; see also State v. Paschall, 1965-
3 NMSC-008, ¶ 3, 74 N.M. 750. Thus, when cases are consolidated in criminal matters, the parties
4 and court must be held to the sentencing limitations applicable to a trial based on one charging 5 document. See Torres v. Santistevan, 2023-NMSC-021, 536 P.3d 465. Subject to opposition by 6 either party, the court has discretion to consolidate cases when an issue bears on all pending cases;
7 for example, in addressing questions of competency or determining conditions of release. On 8 resolution of the issue, the cases are considered unconsolidated and shall be returned to the court 9 originally assigned.

10 This rule is not to be conflated with the joinder of offenses or defendants, which continues 11 to be governed by Rule 6-306 NMRA.
